

Columbus, O., March 14.—Following a conference with Ohio and West Virginia union officials, Tom L. Lewis, national president of the United Mine Workers, announced that 10,000 miners in Ohio and western Pennsylvania employed by operators who own mines in the Tascara was district, which has been the scene of dispute for nearly a year, would suspend work next Monday. Only action by the operators in the meantime in coming to the miners' terms could prevent the suspension, said Lewis.

City Property Valuations
Are So Near Market Value

That the Difference Between Appraisalment and Selling Price is Covered by Ten Per Cent. as Shown by One Hundred and Fifty Transfers of City Property Made Since Appraisalment Was Finished.

Forty-nine Sell for Less Than Appraisalment—Not Likely that State Commission Will Disturb City Appraisalment, But Farm Lands Will be Boosted All the Way from Sixty Per Cent. to Eighty Per Cent. Over Present Valuations.

OVER NINETY DOLLARS FOR FARMS.

County Auditor Anda E. Henkle met with the Ohio State Tax Commission and other auditors from different counties of Ohio in Columbus Monday.

On the 6th the auditors of Clark, Madison, Green, Fayette, Clinton, Highland, Pickaway, Ross, Preble, Montgomery, Butler, Warren, Clermont, Brown, Adams, Pike and Scioto counties were notified by the Commission to be present in Columbus at the office of the Commission on Monday, March 13th, at nine o'clock, a. m.

The Commission in addition to other matters connected with the quadrennial appraisalment of real estate, will consider the appraisalment of any city or cities that may be in your county the letter stated as the object of the meeting.

All of the auditors notified were Table with 5 columns: Township, No. acres, Appraisalment, Current Valuation, and Increase. Rows include Concord, Green, Jasper, Jefferson, Madison, Marion, Paint, Perry, Union, and Wayne.

On a total acreage of 255,133 of farm lands the Commission had placed a valuation of $23,119,924 on an average valuation of $90.60 per acre the county over.

Over in Clinton, Madison, Highland, Ross and Green and Pickaway increases were made, only of course, not in such large amounts as those of Fayette. Under the increase pro-in attendance and the matters of appraisalment of real estate for county and city of such great moment nowadays was thoroughly discussed.

The commission had before it the quadrennial appraisalments together with a mass of statistical information gathered from the transfer records of the various counties.

On the walls conspicuously displayed was a huge map covered over with figures, showing by each township the quadrennial appraisalment figures and the valuation proposed to be placed on the farm lands in that township by the Tax Commission.

The auditors were called upon to look at the map and familiarize themselves with the figures and then answer to the commission any good reason they might have for not making the increase as there noted.

The following table will tell the story of just about how the Fayette county appraisalment looked on the map after the commission had placed its valuations on the lands:

Highland, from $-- to $68.

There is gradually getting to be a better understanding existing among the land owners about this appraisalment, since it is becoming more generally known that the purpose is not to increase the amount of the taxes but simply to revise the plan. In fact the new law expressly forbids the collection of more taxes than is made at present.

It seems reasonably certain now that farm valuations in this county will be increased by the State Tax Commission in percentages running from 60 per cent. to 80 per cent.

In the matter of city valuations, however, the Board finds its most serious obstruction. In nearly every instance the appraisalment of city properties is very near the real market value.

For instance, in the city of Washington since the appraisalment here was completed, it has been possible to get from the records the exact consideration for the transfer of 150 pieces of city property and in these 150 transfers, 49 have been consideration less than the appraised value, while in 191 instances the consideration has been more than the appraised value. Taking the consideration for the 150 pieces the selling price is within 10 per cent. of the appraised value.

This it would seem indicated that the appraisalment is about as near the real value as it is possible for human beings to get it.

Every one realizes that while the law requires the appraisalment to be at the actual value, yet it is not possible to make it exactly that value. In fixing the appraisalment it must be necessarily as near the real value as human beings can judge it and the experts think the showing here in Washington is a very creditable one.

It is by no means out of the question though that a little increase may be made in Washington valuations. If so, of course it will be only with a view to raising the necessary money to run the city, in no event to be more than is now collected.

Again, as in farm land valuations a change of plan only.

The chaos which now exists among property owners, county officials and Tax Commission, is something fierce and what the outcome will be is now hard to fathom.

Real estate here in Washington can not stand much, if any, increase, and the drive must be against intangible property if the duplication can be forced up to a grand total, large enough to make a one per cent. law do the work.

SECURES NEW MEN

Manager Junk, of the Swope Garage Machine Co. has returned from a business trip, during which he employed three men for the new plant. One of the men is a practical rubber man and the other two factory and garage auto repair men.

They will be here at once to begin. Manager Junk is well satisfied over his trip and thinks he has secured three of the most capable work men ever brought to this city.

RAILROAD COMPANY WOULD LOCATE FACTORIES

Along the Line, and With that Purpose in View Has Written a Letter to Mr. H. D. Chaffin, as President of the Business Men's Club of This City--Concerted Effort May Result in Good to Both.

Mr. H. D. Chaffin, of this city, is in receipt of the following letter from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company:

Cincinnati, March 9th, 1911. Mr. H. D. Chaffin, President Business Men's Association, Washington C. H., Ohio.

Dear Sir:—I wish you would write to Mr. Edson Van Steenburg, of the Genl. Manufacturing Co., Bellefontaine, O.

He has a good proposition, I think, in regard to locating a plant for the manufacturing of churns and hay slings, etc. The proposition sounds good to me and suggest that you get in touch with him with a view of interesting him in your city.

Yours truly, H. A. FINDLEY, Industrial Agent.

The letter, so far as the general public is concerned is scarcely self-explanatory.

Back of it all lies the desire of the railroad company to build up industries along the line of its road, which, if it can be done will result in much benefit to the road. It is understood that letters of similar import relating to different institutions have been sent to leading citizens of the cities and towns all along the line of the road.

It is possible that something of real good to both the communities and to the railroad company. It is, of course, an advantage to both the town and the railroad company to work in conjunction on the matter of securing factories.

HERMAN SWINEHART WILL GO TO MISSOURI

Where He Has Accepted a Flattering Offer as Teacher of English Literature in the Marysville School---Many Friends Here and at Wellston Congratulate Him.

The Wellston Daily Sentinel contains the following article of interest to a large circle in this city, as well as through the surrounding country, and our neighboring cities of Bloomington and New Holland:

Prof. Swinehart, one of the most efficient members of our high school faculty, received a telegram Saturday, from Marysville, Mo., tendering him a position, as head of the English Literature department of North West State Normal school. He accepted the position and left Sunday night to assume his new duties. Mr. Swinehart has been here but a short time, but the time was golden to him and he has made a host of friends not only among older people, but even the boys of his own classes, strange to say, cherish a fond regard for him, and he is one of the very few faculty members, who have left the city, whom the boys parted

New Building Association Organized

The incorporators of Washington's new Citizens Building and Loan Co. met today and elected the following as directors: A. E. Henkle, H. G. Coffman, Phil E. Davis, A. C. Patton, Pope Gregg and G. H. Legend of Holyrood Palace.

Holyrood palace, Edinburgh, Scotland, once a British royal residence, is the subject of a strange legend. Robert Louis Stevenson alludes to it in his little book on Edinburgh. "There is a silly story," he writes, "of a subterranean passage between the castle of Holyrood and a bold highland piper who volunteered to explore its windings. He made his entrance by the upper end, playing a strathspey. The curious footed it after him down the street, following his descent by the sound of the chanter from below, until all of a sudden, about the level of St. Giles', the music came abruptly to an end and the people in the street stood at fault with hands uplifted. Whether he was choked with gases or perished in a quag or was removed bodily by the evil one remains a point of doubt, but the piper has never again been seen or heard of from that day to this."

"Scouts" Have Arrived Boys Going "Wild" Over Them!

They're here, boys! Those world-famous "Boy Scout" Shoes—the shoes you have been reading about in the big magazines—the shoes that have made such a tremendous hit in the big cities—are now in town and ready for you. And they're "beauts"! Better than the magazines said they were, if such a thing is possible. Nothing like them for baseball, running, jumping or any outdoor sport. Colors: Olive, Tan and Black.

Little Boys', size 10-13, $2.00
Boys', size 1-5, $2.50
Big Boys' and Men's, size 6-10, $3.00

The "BOY SCOUT" Shoe

is made especially for the growing foot. It's the most sensible—the most attractive—the most comfortable shoe ever made for rough and tumble wear.

The tops are as soft as a glove—they're made from Elk Skin Leather. Soles are made from high grade Elk Sole Leather and heels are solid Elk Leather. Our secret tannage process makes the soles wear two to three times as long as common soles. And they're put on so good they can't pull off.

"Boy Scouts" are made without linings—they're the coolest and most healthful shoes on the market.

Tell your pa and your ma about them. Tell your pa he can get a pair for himself, too. Tell him they'll outwear two to three pairs of ordinary shoes. Have him bring you up to look at them—costs nothing to see them.

Good Luck Charm With Every Pair

You get a "Swastika" Good Luck Charm with every pair of "Boy Scouts" Shoes you buy. The picture in the corner gives you an idea how it looks. It's made of a specially prepared metal that looks just like gold, and it always stays bright. Makes a dandy prize for ball games, races, etc.

"Boy Scouts" are going like hot cakes, so hurry up or you'll have to wait until we send for more.

"It's not the kind of face that ever grew on you," was the indignant and unexpected reply of the maternal being; "you'd be better looking if it had!"

"Have you ever tried a fireless cooker?"

"Yes. We've had one for six months. My wife has tried to fire her and I've told her to go, but she simply ignores our requests and says she'll scratch the eyes out of any other girl we dare to bring into the kitchen."

WHY THESE MANEUVERS.

The action of the government in mobilizing a large fighting force along the Mexican frontier has aroused, quite naturally, a great deal of curiosity among our people.

That the government is not actuated by the existence of any substantial cause for the unusual demonstration and expenditure of money, may be, at once, dismissed without serious consideration.

We may rest assured that a real and substantial cause exists. The government, of course, in crises like the present one cannot publish the reasons for its actions nor its future plans broadcast even among our own people.

So far the most complaint has come from the "softies" who object to this country imposing another war of conquest on Mexico. No need to waste sympathy on the Mexican on that ground. In the first place he doesn't want it and in the second place the government has no such intention.

We have, however, a large number of people who are entitled to the protection of the stars and stripes, who live in Mexico and have large property interests there.

In addition to that, England, France, Germany, Italy, Russia, Japan and almost every other nation of the earth, has subjects who live in the country of Diaz, and have investments there.

The lives and the property of these people are in jeopardy and they are asking for protection.

Uncle Sam has said, in substance, that no foreign country can meddle in affairs governmental in this hemisphere.

We have then to protect, the lives and property, not only of our own citizens but those of the other nations who have subjects in Mexico.

It is up to us then to be ready, as a nation, to throw about these people and their property, absolute protection or else—

Well it is like the little boy at school said about his apple, "There ain't going to be no core"—there is not going to be any "or else" to this situation. The United States is going to be ready to handle any condition which may arise.

That seems to be about the most plausible reason for the present military activity and there is absolutely no need to waste tears on the theory that we are getting ready to impose on Mexico.

No chance.

STRENUOUS AT SEVENTY.

A case which furnishes a striking illustration of ability, thrift and energy long retained and which is seldom, unfortunately met with is that of Mrs. W. C. Price, 70 years of age, widow of a veteran of the Civil War, will be graduated with a class of young men and women in a western commercial college this spring, her diploma showing she is a competent stenographer and typist.

This woman began her studies last September, attending school five days a week, and up to today she has been absent from only one session. At the home of her son, Mrs. Price said she expected to take up a homestead in Oregon after graduating and expects to open an office in a neighboring town, making a specialty of stenographic work and collecting to support her while acquiring 160 acres of land. She has been identified with the equal suffrage movement since 1880 and was the second woman to register in Spokane when the ballot was given to the women of Washington. She is opposed to the tactics employed by the militant element in England and elsewhere, believing the method is wrong.

We once in a while hear of men who are active in business after they have passed the allotted span of three-score years and ten, but almost without exception they are still active in a profession, business or trade chosen early in life and followed so many years continuously that it has become almost second nature to continue in the groove chosen.

In such cases the remarkable feature is the physical and mental power to continue in the work.

Very few people are able, we take it to call to mind an instance where a man past 70 years of age has laid out a new plan of battle to wrest a living from the world and that a woman should do so is doubly remarkable.

There are, of course, instances where men of that age take up a new work but almost invariably it is only when driven to it by dire necessity, and then only with the idea of getting enough to keep soul and body together until the final summons comes.

But in far off Washington there lives a woman who has passed the allotted time—three score years and ten—who is not preparing to die but making preparations to live and build a fortune.

This woman is equipping herself—consuming both time and money in the work too—to go into the world and make not only a living but a fortune.

Starting to live and not preparing to die.

That Pacific Coast air certainly produces some wonders.

POETRY FOR TODAY

DAYBREAK.

Arouse thee, O day, and reconquer thy world!
Night's challenging banners, triumphant unfurled,
Float wide on the somnolent breeze
The valleys lie muffled and misty in sleep.
Gray shadows, like dread ghosts, uncertainly creep
O'er the face of the shuddering seas.
Arouse thee! Undo the enchantments of night.
With tremulous pulsings and breathings of light
Pursue as he fainting retires.
Pluck the reddening rays from thine opaline quivers!
Slant them up at the last of the stars where it shivers
In the ash of its faltering fires.
Unfasten thy curtains, fold upon fold,
Set wider thy flood gates of billowy gold.
Lo! the lark is awake. He is fluting thy name
From the quivering heights where the clouds are aflame
Ere follow the full-throated choirs.
The tops of the listening trees are a thrill
With desire for the stir of thy step on the hill.
For thy quickening glance o'er the bush of the plain.
Come, crowned and engirdled with uttermost splendor,
Thy glorious soul undismayed to surrender.
In a breathless outburst of magnificent pain
Rekindle the words with thy limitless light,
Stand forth in unparalleled luster and might,
Every ear to dispel, every shadow to slay,
O invincible day.
—Grace Denis Litchfield.

Legislative Probers Are Finally Convinced

New Penitentiary After Visit to Leavenworth.
Columbus, O., March 14.—"The new prison at Leavenworth and the difference of running in-stitutions on business principles or on political lines," said Senator John W. Freiner, one of the Freiner committee, made a trip west last week. He said if the members had been convinced before they left Ohio needed a new prison, they were sure of it now. Hudson said he was confident the whole thing would be built by convict labor, which is the same as the Leavenworth prison.

Indictments Expected Soon At Danville

Danville Grand Jury Report on Election is Due Today.
Danville, Ill., March 14.—The final report of the Vermillion county grand jury is expected today, when indictments will be returned, it is believed, against some of the most prominent politicians of Danville for various crimes against the ballot.
An indictment against E. X. Le-ware, son-in-law of former Speaker Cannon and president of the Danville National bank, was drawn and sent to the room. It accused Mr. Le-ware of illegally using money to corrupt voters.
Mr. Woodyard, former foreman, returned to the grand jury room after a illness of two weeks. He is said to have fought against immediate ad-judgment.
A primary election for city officials is in progress today.

School Boy Drove Man To Death

Miamisburg, O., March 14.—Rather than take a chance with a howling mob composed of high school boys and railroad employees who were pursuing him, a well-dressed stranger plunged into the Miami river and drowned before the mob reached him.
The man, who was about 22 years old, made his appearance near the high school just as it was letting out and started making improper actions toward the schoolgirls. He was ordered away, but on refusing, the high school boys pursued and were joined by several men. When the chase became hot the man dodged into an open doorway in North Main street at the home of Henry Clensy and, grabbing a shotgun hanging on the wall, pointed it at his pursuers and pulled the trigger. It was not loaded, and he again took to his heels, running toward the river, pulling off his overcoat as he ran. Without looking back he waded in beyond the depth and disappeared.

south of Juarez faster than the fed-erals can fix them. He has completed the insurrecto threat to cut off Rabago and Cuellar from Juarez, and they are also cut off from Chihuahua. Juarez is now garrisoned only by a few hundred men, and the insurrectos expect to use the hands now gathered along the border for an attack on the town if Madero proves successful in his campaign against Chihuahua, which he now has be-sieged.
A battle was fought in the vicinity of Santa Rosalia, Chihuahua, last Friday. The insurrectos had pre-pared to attack a train and rob it, believing it to be merely a freight train. When they got close to it the fed-erals opened with machine guns inside their armored cars and the in-surrectos retreated, leaving many slain.

SCENTS BATTLE AFAR

Yount May Yet Resign to Get Taste of Real Army Life.

Columbus, O., March 14.—Senator Yount is not inclined to take Gov-ernor Harmon's "No" to his proposition to resign his place in the senate to take part in the maneuvers on the Mexican frontier, as final. He was anxiously inquiring among his fellow senators how long, in their opinion, the session was going to last.
Senator Yount has the military spirit, has been major of one of the battalions of the Third regiment, O. N. G., for the last six years, and longs to get into action with the troops on the frontier.

He was telling his associates that he was very seriously considering re-signing his seat in the senate rather than let his membership interfere with possible military service.
Senator Deaton of Lucas also has the military fever. He has seen ser-vice in the Philippines, and was only last week promoted to the rank of captain as a medical officer of the Sixth regiment. It has been suggest-ed that he being a Republican and Senator Yount a Democrat, they might pair on all party matters and withdraw to the frontier.

Trainmen's Strike Is Deadly Battle

Lexington, Ky., March 14.—Ten men have been shot to death by striking firemen or their sym-pathizers on the Cincinnati-Chattanooga division of the Queen & Crescent railway, and many others have been wounded or assaulted since the strike began several days ago, owing to the employment of negro firemen. The mountaineers in the district from Somerset, Ky., to a consid-erable distance south of the Tennessee line have joined with the strikers. Dynamite has been found on the tracks and threats have been made to dynamite the bridges on the line. Wire communication has been cut off in the district around Kings Mountain and southward, and train seldom come through.

Most of the reported killings are being denied by the Cincinnati offi-cials of the road. The killed, so far as known, are: H. M. Holladay, sher-iff, Sheriff Lovett; two other sher-iffs, names unknown, and six negro firemen. Besides these, several white men and several negroes have been beaten or wounded. All engines leaving the shops at Danville, Ky., are equipped with steel-plate armor over the cab windows.

Nashville, Ind., March 14.—Pur-suant to a law who took an active part in the local option election for the days last week were excited greatly when they found on their front doors and porch floors imprints of a bare-chested man. The hand had evidently been dipped in paint and then pressed firmly against the doors or on the porch floors, and it is construed into threats because of activity against the saloon interests.

HOME GARDEN

Should Be Planned to In-crease Results and Save Labor.

BY L. M. MONTGOMERY,
Horticultural Department, Ohio State University.

For best results in the vegetable garden, no matter how small, some definite, careful, intelligent planning must be done in advance of the grow-ing season, and the earlier this re-ceive attention, the better will be the results.

Size of Garden.
By all means plan to devote as large an area to the garden and small fruits as space will allow and the needs of the household require, with a surplus for good measure. If there is time and inclination, make the garden large enough to produce a marketable quantity of fresh season-able vegetables, which may be dis-posed of at a goodly profit.

Shape of Garden.
This may seem a small matter, but some attention given to this particu-lar will give ample recompense through ease of culture and economy of time required in attention.

To facilitate the work of prepara-tion and subsequent cultivation the plot should be at least twice as long as wide, particularly in those gar-dens up to an acre in extent, where the work of preparation is performed by other than hand labor.

Arrangement of Crops.
Thought bestowed upon the proper disposition of the plants to be grown will promote satisfactory results both with respect to culture and pro-ductivity. In all gardens not con-fined to small back-yard areas, the plants should be disposed in rows and not in beds, as is common in many gardens. This gives a maxi-mum area for the use of the plants and enhances ease in culture. As much of the arduous labor as possi-ble should be avoided by the use of wheeled plows, hoes, weedeers, etc. Such implements are inexpensive and, where the area will justify their use, they are to be preferred.

This does not imply the disuse of the hand hoe and rake where needed. The arrangement of the rows of plants with respect to their order and direction will need consideration. The rows may extend in any direc-tion, but commonly a north and south direction is to be preferred, as that admits of a greater and more even distribution of sunshine, which is a matter of importance in closely crowded gardens.

The rows should further be ar-ranged in order of the probable height of the plants to grow in them. For appearance as well as for effi-ciency the taller growing kinds should be grouped and disposed in the back-ground, if possible. At any rate they should be so arranged as to cast as little shade as possible upon the re-maining vegetation. Perennial crops should be placed to one side of the tract so as not to interfere with the culture of the remainder.

Varieties.
There is wide choice in this mat-ter, but the amateur as well as com-mercial gardener will do well to con-fine his attention to a few choice varieties of such plants as are likely to give the greatest return and sup-ply the tastes of the household. Com-mercial gardeners must consult the tastes of his patrons and plant ac-cordingly. Little space should be given to new and untried varieties of any kind of plant. Confine the selection to standard varieties as listed in the seed catalogues and re-com-mended by local gardeners.

Some space may be devoted to promising new varieties, but they should not be dominant. When you find something good, don't be in too great a hurry to discard it for some-thing else. On the other hand, be quick to take advantage of any new variety that has proven worthy.

Proportion of Crops.
The usefulness of the garden will be largely determined by a certain proportionate quantity of space de-voted to different crops. This factor is largely controlled, first, by the tastes and appetites of the consumers, and second, by the comparative pro-ductivity of the different crops.

Do not plant more of any crop than the probable demands will re-quire.

The commercial gardener must cater to the tastes of his individual customers. He can not afford to dis-regard any persistent call for any article lest the customer have his needs in that particular supplied elsewhere and so transfer his patron-age.

Location of the Garden.
Other things being equal, a gentle south or southeast slope is to be pre-ferred for garden purposes. Earliness is a prime essential in all gardening efforts, and a south slope may be ex-pected to get into condition several days in advance of ground that has a northerly slope. The season of growth, also, extends later in such cases, and these few days may mean the maturing of one additional crop per season, besides the benefits which would obtain by the earliness of the first crop.

An Early "Trust."
As an example of trusts and monop-olies prevalent even in that early day it may be mentioned that in 1750 one Benjamin Crabb obtained the exclu-sive right to make sperm candles in Massachusetts for fourteen years. A year later, however, a factory was started in Providence, R. I., and with-in the decade there were eight fac-tories in New England and one in Philadelphia. Their output speedily re-duced the price of candles, which not long before sold for 5 shillings a pound. In those days $125 was worth fully three times as much as it is now.—N. Hudson Moore in Designer.

LEGALITY OF MARRIAGES AGAIN TO THE FRONT

By Reason of the Practice, Now Growing General Again, of Holding Off Entry of Decree---Divorcees Labor Under Mistaken View that Announcement of Judge is Final---Entry Must be Made.

That there are undoubtedly a few Fayette county couples who imagine themselves divorced but who are still bound in wedlock, is evident from a cursory glance at local court records. The misconception arises from the fact that the would-be divorcees believe that the decree of the judge which pronounces the order of separation is in itself a cutting of the marriage bond.

This idea is erroneous. It is not until the decree is entered on the court's record that the order is binding and the divorcees are separated in the eyes of the law.

"A court speaks only through its record," say the judges, when their attention was called to such a possibility, "and until the decree is made of record it is the mere direction to prepare an entry," he said.

Many Remarriages Illegal.

Some time ago there was a rush of several hundred couples in New York to have their decrees rendered one, two and three years before, entered. A judge of the supreme court there, who corresponds to the local common pleas court judges, had declared what is known to lawyers, but not to laymen in general, that the mere announcement by the court of a divorce does not of itself operate as a divorce. Many of those who had brought suits and prevailed in their petition suddenly realized—in some instances after remarriage—that they had failed to have an entry prepared to complete the proceeding.

The reason that entries are not prepared promptly and as a matter of fact by attorneys, generally is that the fee has not been paid and the attorney lets the entry slip until he receives his retainer.

To obviate the hardship that might arise from the consequences of such neglect, courts usually enter the decree as of date when decision in the case was announced.

Sometimes in the local courts these entries appear on the local docket.

The lesson to be drawn from all this is that Fayette county divorcees should see to it before contracting another marriage that the first knot there, who corresponds to the local

London At Outs With Water Company

As the result of a dispute between the city authorities and the water company, our neighboring town of London is practically without fire protection. After numerous conferences, in which they were not able to agree, the city shut off its water supply, rendering practically useless its one fire engine. It has two chemical extinguishers, a hose reel, a combination hook and ladder and 3000 feet of hose.

The water company supplies its mains from six wells, but if fire breaks out the city will have to depend on such a supply as it can get from private wells and cisterns.

ALWAYS ON TOP.

All the finest houses in London seem to belong to Americans.

Sunderland house, occupying a whole square in Cuzon street, behind the Marquis of Landsdowne's residence, belongs to the Duchess of Marlborough, and the lawn facing Sunderland house is the fine garden of the Earl of Granard's splendid Charles street residence, bought with the Ogden Mills money.

In Grosvenor square, which is sacred, the most imposing mansions are those of A. J. Drexel, J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., and the late Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, who was Miss Yznaga.

The finest house in London is undoubtedly Dorchester House, in Park lane. Here lives Whitelaw Reid.

The list might be continued for a column or more.

The Crafty Clerk.

"The late Frederick Gebhard," said a New York clubman, "had a good-humored cynicism. I remember a story he used to tell, and I'll repeat this story, because it illustrates well Gebhard's view of human nature."

"A clerk—so the story ran—entered the office one afternoon about an hour late. He had taken, that is to say, two hours for luncheon instead of one. A fellow clerk said to him on his entrance, in a low, warning voice:

"Look out for the boss. He's been yelling for you since half-past 12. Bear me, what a temper he's in!"

"The dilatory clerk's face fell. He frowned. Then he hurried as fast as he could go to a florist's in the next street, where he bought a dollar bunch of violets.

"On his second return the boss's bull-like frowning was the first sound he heard.

"Isn't that Jones back yet? Go fetch Jones, somebody! Jones!"

"The clerk, the violets in his hand, hastened into his employer's office. An explosion followed.

"At last, eh? Well, Jones, on Saturday you can just go to the cashier and—"

"But the clerk interrupted in a low, mysterious voice:

"I beg your pardon, sir, but the lady asked me to give you these."

"And Jones placed the fragrant violets in his employer's hand.

"What—what's this?"

"The employer was a remarkably ugly little man—a short, fat, bald little man, always badly dressed and always in need of a shave—and as he stared with sparkling eyes at the flowers in his pudgy hand the clerk could hardly keep from smiling. But he said:

"The lady with the sable muff, sir—a young, slender lady. She came in at noon and waited a long while—that is what made me so late. Finally she said she couldn't wait any longer. She unpinned these flowers from her corsage and told me to give them to you. She said you'd understand."

"The little, ugly employer chuckled. He smelt the violets again and again. Then he said:

"To tell you the truth, Jones, I'm puzzled. To be sure, it might be—no. No, frankly, I'm puzzled. I can't imagine who it was. Try and find out for me if you can; and, by the way, mum's the word in the office."

"Jones, from that day forth—so Gebhard ended his story—stood in confidential relations with his employer, his pay was raised and the old man all that winter stared long and significantly at every lady with a sable muff.

A liquid laugh is said to be less stimulating than a liquid "smile." same thing can't be said of eggs.—Chicago News.

AT THE COLONIAL.

The Colonial is putting on a star feature the first three nights of this week in the Cora Youngblood Corson Sextette, musical girls from the Golden West.

Picturesque stage settings, brilliant costuming and electric light effects contribute to the act, which is decidedly one of the best seen at the Colonial this season. The brass sextette plays splendidly and Cora Youngblood in her solo work with baritone and bass horns is a performer with few feminine rivals.

The audience refused to be satisfied after a big program of brass orchestration and singing and brought them back again and again.

Enoise Summers, "The Girl that Scatters the Blues", keeps the audience laughing during her act and Arthur Bernard is good in make-up, songs and jokes as an Italian street singer.

CARD OF THANKS.

I want to thank our friends in Washington C. H., for the kindness and sympathy shown us in the loss of our loving daughter, Florence. C. W. HASTINGS.

The Smithson's Holiday

"It's no use," said Smithson, turning away from the litter of guide books and excursion programs with an expression of disgust.

"What do you think about Black-sea?" suggested Mrs. Smithson.

"Too crowded,"

"Well, shall we say Broadbeet?"

"Not likely."

Mrs. Smithson considered a moment before replying. "I think we will decide upon Westsea."

"Pardon me, Nell," he said, "but Westsea is a place I particularly dislike."

"And yet," she returned, pointing. "We spent our honeymoon there."

Mrs. Smithson for the first time in her brief married life fancied she had a grievance.

"I shall go to Westsea, or no where!" she said.

It was the first time she had ever been against him, and Bertie paled.

"Very well," he replied, equally as decidedly. "I, personally, prefer Northsea, and intend going there—alone, if necessary."

"One morning two cabs rolled up to the door, and they stood for a moment exchanging addresses before departing.

"Will you come dear?" he muttered softly.

She shook her head negatively.

"Hope you'll have a good time," he ventured again, as he closed the cab door behind him.

She returned his wishes with a tremulous voice, and in another moment he was standing alone.

Monday found him tortured with a mental conflict of love, together with fear for her safety, against pride.

Tuesday afternoon was far advanced before he arrived at Westsea, his heart full of contriteness.

"Mrs. Smithson?" queried the landlady. "Why, she left suddenly this morning for Northsea. The poor thing has been miserable ever since her arrival here, and suddenly made up her mind to leave."

Cursing his luck, Bertie made the tedious journey back to Northsea again.

"Has my wife arrived here?" he questioned eagerly.

"She returned to Westsea by the early morning train."

"But my wife?"

"A telegram did come, sir," was the reply; "but she had left."

Smithson collapsed into the nearest chair and tried in vain to conceal his chagrin.

Back to Westsea.

Arrived, he inquired for her. Only a servant was at the house and she told him: "The poor lady came back here last night, but when you were not here she said you must 'ave gone 'ome for her."

"Well," said Smithson, "I am going home to meet my wife now, but if I should miss her again—and, candidly, I am beginning to have doubts of ever seeing her again—you will grip hold of her, shut her up, do anything to prevent her escaping me again, won't you?"

"Course I will," she answered again. And Bertie set off to catch the midnight train home.

The train made a quick run for about half the distance, and then suddenly came to a standstill with a jerk.

"Train off the line higher up," the conductor yelled. "Passengers will have to walk to the next station past the obstruction."

A country station was reached at last, and together with the other passengers, he stepped into the waiting room. A lady weeping at the far side, away from the crowd, attracted his attention. Something about her apparel seemed familiar, and he silently approached her. As he did so she raised her head and gave a despairing glance around.

"Nell!" he cried. "At last!"

"Bertie!" she responded, with a choking sob, and in another moment he was holding her in a fond embrace.

And it all ended in their spending the remainder of their vacation right there.

Paper Hints.

To straighten out paper that has been rolled open it with the thumb, curve away from you, and run it over the sharp—not the curved or beveled—edge of a table. It is flat immediately.

The sharp edge is good, too, for tearing paper, better than a paper cutter, in fact. Draw the paper to be cut straight and quickly across the edge, and there will be a clean tear, produced equally well in tissue or wrapping paper.

It is not generally known that bread-crumbs are the finest of cleansers for white paper. Rub an old crust of stale bread over the paper, and every sort of stain, fingermarks, dust, water stains, will disappear like magic. It is safer to use on fine books and pictures than the softest of rubbers. Blow, do not rub, the crumbs off afterward.

On Saying Grace.

I own that I am disposed to say grace upon twenty other occasions in the course of the day besides my dinner. I want a form for setting out upon a pleasant walk, for a moonlight ramble, for a friendly meeting, or a solved problem. Why have we none for books, those spiritual repasts—a grace before Milton—a grace before Shakespeare—a devotional exercise proper to be said before reading the Marie Queen?—Charles Lamb.

SPRING FABRICS ARE EMBROIDERED

Voiles and Organdies In Contrasting Colors for Light Frocks.

OF the novel spring cotton materials perhaps the prettiest are the embroidered organdies and lawns. These are not in the least the same sort of materials displayed for last summer, and most of them are pretty enough to take the place of more costly silks and voiles.

Not only the design but the effective use of different colors in the embroidering is the attraction in these thin stuffs, and one of the prettiest was a cotton voile, upon which were embroidered little wreaths in delicate pink and blue with now and then a showing of the palest green tendril.

Another effective design was a tiny blue violet, embroidered on a ground of the palest pink, while a plainer effect was seen in a white cotton barred voile.

At intervals there appeared a dot about a quarter of an inch in diameter, of brown, shading from a rich color to a light golden brown.

Those in colored effects, the blues and pinks and yellows are lovely with the embroidery of a slightly darker shade than the background.

NEW THIN FROCKS PRACTICAL AND CHIC

Among the most practical of white frocks for morning wear are those of cotton voile, marquisette, and even very fine crepe. Not only are these smart and fashionable, but they launder beautifully, which is an added attraction when considering the merits of white frocks.

They are simply made, but by occasional introduction of color are made individual and given the needed relief from entire white.

Batiste and lawn have been used for the simple thin frocks for years, but these newcomers will find a hearty welcome.

GOLD AND SILVER HAIR NETS NOW IN VOGUE

Instead of buying a hair net which will be invisible when worn over an elaborate coiffure, the fashionable woman now buys one of silver or gold with which to keep in order her lovely tresses.

The chignon, the most popular of new hair effects, is covered with this linked and shimmering metallic net and when the hair is a lustrous black the effect of a gold net over the dark hair is distinctly unique.

GLOVES ARE CARRIED NOT WORN, IN PARIS

Parisian women at the theater or elsewhere in evening dress have started a fashion of carrying their gloves in their hands instead of wearing them.

This fashion, which started some time ago, has now become general, and the woman who wears a multitude of rings should be thankful that she may carry her gloves.

Sure herald of warmer days is the fancy handkerchief now displayed in the window shops. Now some of the shippers certainly are, if not in fact then in decoration, or being, or the shape of the hand.

Last summer there appeared in the outer part of the season black satin and velvet slippers, but with the thinness of soles. This spring, however, these same slippers will appear with heavy soles, which will surely make the satin slipper, at least, rise in popularity, for as a cool foot covering it cannot be excelled.

The stage toe, in a modified form, is to be seen on the finer grade of slippers, and these will be a boon to the woman with large feet, since the very short vamp detracts considerably from the size of the foot.

The one eyelet pump with the long tongue is shown, and is thought will be a general favorite.

Pumps for the young girl have heretofore been a problem, for either the heel was very low or she was forced to make the regulation inch and a half heel, which was generally too high.

Now, however, the manufacturers are turning out patent leather pumps daintily lined with scarlet morocco, with heels about three-quarters of an inch in height.

The flat bow of ribbed silk or leather is used on these, although some come with one eyelet, in which case a large ribbon bow may be tied.

The colored slippers, blue, purple, etc., once popular, will be replaced by tan, black and white, and incidentally, the white slipper and shoe in kid, buckskin and canvas will be much worn during the coming season.

"EXERCISE AND REST."

What is the relation between exercise and rest? Work is that at which we must continue, whether interested or not, whether we are tired or not. It used to be thought that the prime requisite of rest was the use of facilities other than those involved in the labor of the day. But there is such a thing as fatigue which goes deeper than daily work. We can work so hard as to become exhausted—to exhaust for any kind of work. Perhaps this will fatigue.

It is coming to be regarded as fundamentally true that rest from such fatigue demands continuity; that, for example, four periods of 15 minutes each of rest is not the equivalent of one hour's rest; that a man who goes on a vacation and takes half an hour of his business work every day is doing the same thing as the man who has a horse with a sore back. He kept the saddle on only a few minutes each day, but the sore did not have a chance to heal. Rest periods must be sufficiently consecutive to overcome consecutive fatigue.—North American Review.

SEA BATHING FOR PEARLS.

"Your pearls, madam, have lost their luster. They need a salt bath," the lapidary said.

"A salt bath for pearls?" cried the lady.

"Yes, madam," the man answered. "The hot summer was very trying on all pearls. Pearls fade under a hot spell as human beings do. And just as a sea bath tones and braces the human being, so it restores a pearl. This collar of yours is dull and lifeless now, but I'll bathe it daily for a week, and when I return it to you next Friday it will have the very same pink glow it possessed when you got it five years ago from Paris."

Menhaden Fishers' Big Year.

Capt. Isaac M. Russell of Northumberland is in the roundup this year again the "king fisher." His record is seventeen million menhaden for his steamer, or $15,000 more in value than any other captain, so the talk goes.

This has been a remarkably successful year in the Virginia menhaden industry, making up for some bad past years. There are already 45 steamers in the Virginia fleet and this will be increased another year.—Virginia Citizen.

WANING POPULARITY.

"Any callers, George?"

"Lots of them, sir."

"Any besides creditors?"

"No, sir."

"Holding their own in numbers?"

"Falling off, sir."

"By gad, how soon we are neglected and forgotten!"

"Seems to me you need a good deal of expense money, my son."

"Yes, dad, our crowd is a very expensive one."

"But I don't see why you should support the whole crowd, my son."

Mother—Why did you not scream when Mr. Clive kissed you?

Daughter—He threatened me.

"How?"

"He said if I did he'd never kiss me again."

"You are an optimist."

"I am," replied Mr. Dustin Star. "I not only hope for the best, but I make practical arrangements to get it."

Good luck likes to visit people who are not expecting it.

WAIST LINE WILL RETURN IN SPRING

Straight Up and Down Effect Will Pass Out in Short Time.

SLIGHT as the changes will be in spring fashions in everything that pertains to milady, changes there will be and these are eagerly grasped by the fashion world.

For several seasons past the creators of styles decided that the waistline should be nil, but there is an innovation this spring and there is to be a slight nipping in of the waist with a corresponding broadening of the hips.

The corset to give the desired shape must necessarily be boned, but by a clever manipulation of the cut and boning this is made possible without making the new corsets painful steel-like casings, most of the newest having but three bones at each side.

In the new French corsets the skirt extensions are not so long, and there is a difference in cut. They extend over the hips in a curving line, but are shorter in front to give greater freedom for the movement of the leg.

Corset Sachet.

One of the most attractive of corset accessories is the corset sachet. Hand-embroidered in pretty silks, delicately perfumed sachet covered with white silk or satin, is a dainty addition to the toilette and something which appeals strongly to the woman brought up in culture and refinement, and for whom anything dainty holds a strong fascination.

Brassieres are a necessity with the low-busted corset, and one of the most attractive is a new model of all-over lace or embroidery prettily trimmed. When this is heavily boned for the large woman the bones are protected by a silk lining.

Used as a corset cover this can be worn under the thinnest of lingerie blouses.

The Girl on the Cover

With a sudden, convulsive clutch George Brunson grabbed the magazine from the news stand. There, staring straight into his eyes from the cover, was a bewitching picture of Grace Cameron—his Grace, whom he had lost and never found, following what he had thought was a lover's quarrel.

"I'll take all of these magazines you've got," Brunson cried to the clerk behind the counter. The clerk stared, and lost no time in bundling up a dozen or more of the magazines. With these under his arm, Brunson hurried back to his room. There he spread the magazines out on the table and few chairs in the room and feasted his eyes on his sweetheart's face. Coherent thought returned to him presently and he sought for the artist's name on the cover. Then hurriedly he penned a note to the publishers of the magazine asking for the artist's address. In the day intervening between the mailing of his note and the receipt of a reply, Brunson did little but purchase new copies of the magazine. He waited away several weary hours in tearing off the magazine covers and in pinning them on the walls of his room.

At last the letter with the address of the artist, A. B. Sloane came. Luckily, Sloane lived in the same city with Brunson and the latter lost no time in hurrying to Sloane's studio. Once there he sent in his card and waited impatiently until the maid returned with it.

"Miss Sloane is out," the maid said, and looked at Brunson curiously. So A. B. Sloane is a woman, he thought to himself.

Three times he tried to see Miss Sloane, but each time was met with the information that she was out. Brunson began to consider the matter mysterious. Why was it that he could never see Miss Sloane? Perhaps she did not thoroughly understand the situation. He would write to her. Accordingly he penned the following note:

"Dear Miss Sloane: I wish to see you to learn the whereabouts of the young lady who posed for the cover design for the present month's issue of 'The Public Magazine.' This young lady was and is my sweetheart. We parted in a quarrel and I have never seen or heard of her until I saw her picture. The young lady in question got the idea that I was engaged to another girl. Can't you let me know where she is so that I can see myself right?"

"Yours Truly, George Brunson."

Hopfully Brunson waited for a reply to this epistle, but no reply came. Again he attempted to call upon Miss Sloane, but again was informed that she was out. Would anything be more mysterious and exasperating he wondered.

Finally, in desperation, he decided to camp at Miss Sloane's door until he either saw her or passed away through sheer exhaustion. Accordingly, his pockets filled with sandwiches, he took up his post near the door one morning. All day he stayed there without results. Many people entered the other rooms, but not one came to Miss Sloane's studio or left. Many curious glances were cast at him, but he did not care. Once or twice he thought the door opened a short distance and someone peeked at him, but he could not be sure. At last late at night, he was rewarded. Someone left the studio and attempted to hurry past him. It was a woman. Brunson caught her by the arm and dragged her to a light. Then he saw Grace Cameron, his sweetheart.

"Why, why!" he cried. "How are you here?"

"I-I got your note," she faltered. "but I didn't reply—I wanted to see if you were in earnest or not. You see I go by the name of A. B. Sloane now. I drew that cover design—of myself. I-I hoped you would see it."

For a moment Brunson looked at her uncomprehending. Then a glad light came into his eyes.

"Have I explained away your quarrel?" he asked. "Do you find me enough in earnest to say 'Yes'?"

He glanced into her face and saw his answer in the divine light which sprang into her eyes at his words.—Frank H. Williams.

Promises to Children.

The promise you make to a child is just as sacred as the one you make to the most important of grown-ups. Nothing should allow you to break it, and it should be considered really a matter of honor to keep to your word here as elsewhere.

There is a story of a little boy whose parents had promised three separate times to take him out driving "the next time," and each time had lightly repudiated the promise. As they drove away on the third occasion, the youngsters stood at the window and sobbed. "There go the two dearest liars in the country!"

And it is true. A broken promise is nothing but a lie, and the lie is no less an offense because it was told to a child.

Freedom.

Indeed, the first point we have all to determine is not how free we are, but what kind of creatures we are. It is of small importance to any of us whether we get liberty; but of the greatest that we deserve it. Whether we can win it, fate must determine; but that we will be worthy of it we may ourselves determine; and the sorrowful fate of all that we can suffer is to have it without deserving it.—Buckley.

Nature's Vegetable Pepsin Given Away Free at Your Nearest Drug Store.

By presenting the coupon below you will receive a trial package of Munyon's celebrated Paw Paw Pills.

Paw Paw is a fruit that grows in most tropical countries and contains the only vegetable pepsin yet discovered. Its action upon the liver and stomach is truly wonderful. Having combined this natural remedy with other medicaments Professor Munyon is giving to the world one of the greatest stomach and liver remedies known to mankind.

Munyon's Paw Paw (Compound) Laxative Pills coax the liver into activity by gentle methods. They do not scour; they do not grip; they do not weaken, but they do start the secretions of the liver, and stomach, thus correcting constipation, which, without doubt, is responsible for most ailments. There are about 26 feet of human bowels, which in many respects is really a sewer pipe. When this pipe is clogged the whole system becomes poisoned, causing biliousness, indigestion and impure blood, which often produces rheumatism and kidney ailments. Ninety-nine out of a hundred of these ailments are now being sold as serious forms of indigestion and so paralyze the bowels that they refuse to act unless forced by some strong purgative.

Munyon's Paw Paw Pills are truly for the blood. They invigorate instead of weaken; they enrich the blood instead of impoverish it.

These pills contain no calomel, no dope. They school the bowels to act without physic.

THE WHIP HAND.

The broken-down Caddy regarded with a gleam of delight the taxi which had broken down. But he spoke no word. The chauffeur began operating on his machine. He turned it and twisted it, but to no avail. And still the caddy spoke not. The chauffeur banged again. He did things to ignition sparks that wouldn't ignite, and cranks that refused to be anything but cranky. And still the caddy, sour of visage, lay low and said nuffin.

Then the chauffeur wiped his beads of brow, and then the caddy, still with the gleam in his eye crossed over. "Ere!" he exclaimed grimly, holding out his whip. "Ere y'are, mister! It 'im with this!"

RABBIT DODGES AN EAGLE

On the open plains of Merced county, California, the jack rabbit is the prey of the bald eagle. One time a rabbit pursued by an eagle was seen to run among the cattle. Leaping from cow to cow, he used these animals as shelter from the eagle's bird.

When the pursuit grew too close the rabbit broke cover for a barbed wire fence. As the eagle swooped down on it here from the left the rabbit moved a few inches to the right and the eagle could not reach him through the fence. When the eagle lifted and came down on the other side the rabbit moved across to the left, and this was continued until the eagle gave up the chase.—St. Nicholas.

THE SELLER "SOLD"

A fashionably dressed woman stepped into a Market street department store to look at some parasols.

The salesman, who was a smooth-mannered, smooth-tongued individual produced one and began to laud it. Then he picked up another one from the counter.

"Now, here," he said, "is a splendid parasol. Just feel how soft and fine the silk is. Note the rich luster of the cloth and the wonderful coloring. Don't you think it is beautiful?"

The woman smiled.

"Yes," she said, "it is very nice. But that happens to be my old parasol which I laid on the counter when I came in"—Philadelphia Times.

A Wifely Scheme.

Mrs. Swift—Why nag your husband so about that carpet? He has agreed to beat it.

Mrs. Smith—Well, if he's thorough it'll make a much better job.

Drowned.

Tall Man (at seashore)—He said anybody could manage a sailboat.

Thin Man—He did—what then?

Tall Man—His funeral is tomorrow.

Smelled a Rat.

Congressman—I heard Senator Koyne is in very bad odor nowadays.

Senator—Yes; he tried to railroad a crooked fertilizer bill through.

The invalid was on the road to recovery and the physician had just presented his bill for $700.

"Doctor," said the patient, "you missed the opportunity of your life. You should have been a nerve specialist."

She—Shall I have your lunch brought up to you here, dear?

He (feebly)—No, love; have it thrown straight overboard. It will save time—and trouble.

Teacher—"What can we do with our useless organs?"

Little Niece—"Trade 'em for some graphs, of course."

"Tommy, Tommy, aren't you ready for school yet?" called his little sister.

"No," shouted back Tommy, parting his hair for the twentieth time that morning. "You'd better go on to school, Sue, 'cause I've got to blacken my shoes and find my hat and books, and, anyhow, I promised to wait for Dick Brown, and, anyhow, I might be late."

"If you are, Thomas, father will whip you this evening when he comes home," came up to the ears of Tommy, not in the voice of Sue, but in his mother's tones.

"Huh!" said Tommy. "Ma never says 'I'll whip you myself.' It's always, 'Thomas, if you don't obey instantly, father'll whip you when he comes home this evening.' I ain't scared of father, anyhow, and I'll prove it to all of 'em. See if I don't by jimminy I've got the finest idea," said Tommy. "I wonder what in the mischief is keeping Dick Brown this morning? I wish he'd hurry on and come."

After what seemed an eternity to the impatient boy, "Tom, Tom," a boyish voice was calling.

"Come on up, Dick, I'm not quite ready," answered Tommy.

"Dick, have you got plenty of lunch?" eagerly questioned Tommy.

"Yes, Tom, I told mother to give me an extra large lunch today. This kind of weather always makes me hungry."

"Fine!" and Tommy was silent.

When the boys came downstairs Tommy's mother was sitting in the library reading her latest book.

"Dear me," she exclaimed as they entered. "Tommy, you are going to be dreadful late, and, as I promised you, your father'll whip you."

Tommy mumbled something about other boys' mothers helping them to dress, walked over to the fruit dish, slipped a couple of oranges and some bananas into his capacious lunch box and walked out of the house, presumably to school.

With a sigh his mother resumed her reading.

Quick as he was out of the hearing of his mother he proposed that he and Dick play "hokey." After much persuasion on the part of Tommy, to the effect that they'd get licked anyhow for being late, Dick finally consented to go.

"Let's hide our books in the old car barn and eat our lunch in the haunted house," boldly suggested Tommy, who at that time felt brave enough to do anything.

"I—er—er," Dick began.

"Coward," sneered Tommy, and then settled it. Dick would do anything to prove that he wasn't a coward.

After eating their lunch the boys went off to a moving picture show, where they were enthralled by the daring of the boy hero, who did all kinds of impossible things. When the show was over the boys came back after their books, but both sets were gone. They searched the whole building, but somebody had sneaked in while they were enjoying themselves and stolen them. The boys, thoroughly frightened and afraid to go home without their books, started weeping.

"Tommy wasn't at school today," Sue electrified her mother by saying.

"I'll bet Tommy's played truant," came from the depths of the library.

"O, Tom, go find him," cried Mrs. Moore, bordering on hysterics. Mr. Moore jumped up, slammed his desk shut, put on his hat and left the house.

"I'll teach that young fellow how to play hokey," said he. "Just wait until I catch him. I'll give him the best lambasting he's ever had in his life."

Dick's father met Tommy's father half-way down the block.

"Come on Brown and help me find Tommy."

"What? Tommy, too?" said Mr. Brown. "Why I was just going up to your house to see if Dick was there."

"Well, you can search elsewhere," said Mr. Moore, "because Tommy's been gone since morning."

Just then he was interrupted by a scared, breathless, boy, who said:

"I saw a light in the old car barn and I heard somebody moaning."

"There's our boys," said Mr. Moore confidently. "Hurry Brown, we'll catch them redhanded."

They made their way to the deserted car barn, and the moans that came from it were enough to frighten the boldest.

"Just listen to those young rapscallins; go through the back door," said Mr. Brown, "and we'll give them a dose of their own medicine."

The boys were sitting down on the floor eating the remains of their luncheon, and between mouthfuls uttering those blood-curdling moans, which were scaring the community.

"Stop that," commanded Mr. Moore, and both Tommy and Dick dropped the sandwiches in their fright.

"Get up this minute and come right home," he continued.

The boys obeyed without a word. Silent and crestfallen they walked slowly home, for they knew what was in store for them when their fathers found out that they had lost their books, besides playing hokey.

To Waterproof Boots.

Mix together two parts of beeswax with one part of mutton fat, and apply to the leather at night; the boots should then be wiped next morning with a flannel. When blacked the boots will not polish so well at first, but after the blacking has been used several times they will polish brilliantly.

MORE FAITH THAN CURE.

"What is your opinion of the faith cure?"

"I am beginning to fear," answered the skeptical person, "that it requires hope and charity more than it does faith."

"Some O' That Stuff."

It was an old farmer who followed the manager of the ball team to his hotel and secured an interview to say: "I was up there and saw the game today."

"Yes."

"Come to town on purpose."

"Yes."

"And now I want you to buy some o' that stuff of you if I can."

"I don't exactly understand," said the manager.

"Why, that salve or liniment or poultice, or whatever it is that your fellers rub on 'em at night to be all right in the morning. It must be something mighty powerful or they'd be laid up for a month after every game. I'm willin' to pay a fair price."

"All we ever use is a little rose water. You can buy it at any drug store."

"Thanks. I'll take home a quart of it. My son Silas he don't play ball, but he's calculatin' to break a colt, run a foot race, lick a circus man, thistle the neck of a bull and run a constable five miles, and I wanted something to sorter take the soreness out of him afterwards. Rose water, eh? Maybe I'll get two quarts. It would be just like Silas to get tangled up with a threshing machine before the summer is out."

The Optimist.

"Talk about optimists," said the man with the red whiskers, "did you ever hear the story about Fred Bustigo?"

"No," said the others.

"Well, the folks in the town where Fred lives are getting up a raffle in aid of charity. There are going to be 10,000 tickets at sixpence each, and the prize is a motor car. Fred took one ticket—now he's busy erecting a garage!"

"Not bad," remarked the man with the many-colored waistcoat. "Reminds me of poor Tom Smithers. Ever hear tell of him?"

"No," said the others.

"Well, poor Tom was poor Tom usually. He often used to go to a fashionable restaurant without a half-penny in his pocket and order a slap-up oyster supper—he reckoned to pay for it with the pearls he hoped to find in the oyster's!"—Ideas.

A Painless Death.

A teacher in the factory district of a New Jersey town had been giving the children earnest lectures upon the poisonousness of dirt.

One morning a little girl raised her hand excitedly and pointed to a boy who seldom had clean hands.

"Teacher," she said "look quick! Jimmie's committin' suicide! He's suckin' his thumb!"

The Real Mistress.

Wife—I'm not going to take the new servant girl along with me any more when I go to market.

Husband—Why not?

Because she puts on so many airs that people who don't know me think that I am the servant girl, and she the mistress.

A FIERCE NIGHT ALARM

Is the hoarse, startling cough of a child, suddenly attacked by croup. Often it aroused Lewis Chamblin of Manchester, O. (R. R. No. 2) for their four children were greatly subject to croup.

"Sometimes in severe attacks," he wrote "we were afraid they would die, but since we proved what a certain remedy Dr. King's New Discovery is, we have no fear. We rely on it for croup and for coughs, colds or any throat or lung trouble." So do thousands of others. So may you. Asthma, Hay Fever, La Grippe, Whooping Cough, Hemorrhages by before it. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Sold by Blackmer & Tanquary.

Announcement Extraordinary!

HAVING PURCHASED THE MONUMENTAL business conducted by my father, P. J. Burke, Sr., for many years, on East street.

I have combined with it my Wellston plant, giving to the people of Washington the largest and most complete monumental works in southern Ohio.

I have already purchased all the latest pneumatic machinery and tools for installation in this shop.

I will make a specialty of the Highest Grade of work, and will be in a position to turn out any job in short order.

THE EDITOR'S PARADISE.

Frederick C. Beyer, a well-known Cleveland editor, told at a recent press banquet a newspaper story.

"A Medina editor died," he said, "and was, of course, directed to ascend to the Abode of the Just. But during the ascent the editor's journalistic curiosity asserted itself, and he said:

"Is it permitted for one to have a look at—er—the other place?"

"Certainly," was the gracious reply, and accordingly a descent to the other place was made. Here the editor found much to interest him. He scurried about, and was soon lost to view.

"His angelic escort got worried at last and began a systematic search for his charge. He found him at last, seated before a furnace, fanning himself and gazing at the people in the fire. On the door of the furnace was a plate saying, 'Delinquent Subscribers.'"

"Come," said the angel to the editor, "we must be going."

"You go on," the editor answered, without lifting his eyes, "I'm not coming. This is heaven enough for me!"—Louisville Times.
